(Orangutans in Peril)

Orangutans in peril

Orangutans are threatened with extinction.

If we do not succeed in protecting their natural habitat - the tropical rainforests of Borneo and Sumatra - these fascinating and highly intelligent primates will have no chance of survival in the wild.

Currently their rainforests are being destroyed mainly because of the spread of bio-fuel palm oil plantations.

The Pasir Panjang sanctuary on Borneo currently takes care of over 300 orangutans, most of them orphans.

New arrivals are often heavily traumatized and suffer from illness, wounds, and malnutrition.

The German non-profit organization Orang-Utans in Not e.V. is trying to help them.
